Historical Note:

In a 1955 speech made before a Nashville civic club, County Judge C. Beverly Briley proposed the possibility of a consolidated government for Nashville and Davidson County. After a series of studies, the City of Nashville and Davidson County Planning Commissions released and recommended a report calling for the consolidation of the two governments in 1956. A charter commission was created in 1957 to establish a consolidation charter, which was voted upon and defeated in 1958. However, the idea of a consolidated government in Nashville and Davidson County did not die. After the annexation of two areas outside the limits of the City of Nashville - the 7th and 16th civil districts - and the extensive government service problems thereof, the possibility of city-county consolidation was raised again.

In the autumn of 1961, a second Metro Charter Commission was created, and the vote to approve the new Metro Charter was held on June 28, 1962. After receiving the necessary double majority inside and outside the City of Nashville, the new Metropolitan Government of Nashville and Davidson County came into effect on April 1, 1963 with Beverly Briley as the first Metropolitan Mayor. This establishment of Metro Government constituted one of the most complete consolidations of a city and county occurring within the United States, and it received national attention.

Scope and Contents of the Collection:

This collection contains approximately 135 items, including administrative files, clippings, publications, reports, and speeches, relating to the formation and establishment of the Metropolitan Government of Nashville and Davidson County. Dates range from 1939 to 1997; however, the bulk dates are from 1956-1974. The materials in this collection cover the first failed attempt at consolidation, the establishment of the Metro Charter Commission, the successful vote for consolidation, and subsequent analyses of the financial, political, and economical effects of Metro Government.

Arrangement:

This collection is arranged into five series: administrative files, clippings, publications, reports, and speeches.

The administrative files series contains materials relating to the employee benefit system, elections, organization of government, and a 1958 resolution.

The clippings series contains newspaper clippings about the events leading up to city-county consolidation, the Metro Charter and activities of the Metro Charter Commission, and the national attention received as a result of the consolidation of Nashville and Davidson County in 1963.

The publications series contains various published materials relating to studies in municipal and metropolitan government, articles about Nashville's consolidation, and pamphlets. A large number of issues of National Civic Review and some published articles written by Mayor Beverly Briley are included.

The reports series contains various reports relating to studies of Metropolitan Nashville and Davidson County, including a report about the effects of Metro on African-American politics, an analysis and evaluation of the first decade of consolidated government, and outlines of general policies, analyses, and plans for a Metro Charter and for Metropolitan Government.

The speeches series includes several speeches the need for a Metro Government, panel discussion, and financial issues. In several speeches, the speakers are not identified.
